

Website Copy and SEO Refresh

Homepage rewrite for "Clearflow Plumbing", a fictional local plumbing company. Prepared by Prosync Solutions.

1. The brief

The homepage talked about the company instead of the customer, had no clear call to action, and its title and headings did not mention the service or the area. The job: rewrite the page so a visitor with a leaking pipe knows within five seconds that they are in the right place, and so search engines can tell what the page is about.

2. What was wrong

Issue	Why it matters	Fix applied
Title tag was "Home Clearflow"	Tells neither searcher nor search engine what the business does or where.	Service + area + brand, 56 characters.
No meta description	Search engines pull random page text for the snippet.	Benefit-led description with a call to action, 150 characters.
H1 was "Welcome to our website"	The most important heading carried no meaning.	H1 states the service, the area and the promise.
Long "about us" opening paragraph	Visitors scan. Nobody reads 120 words before finding the phone number.	Two-line intro, phone number and booking button above the fold.
Services listed as one paragraph	Hard to scan, no internal links to service pages.	Scannable list, each item linking to its own page.
Vague claims ("best quality")	Unprovable claims are ignored.	Specifics the client can stand behind: response window, fixed quotes, guarantee length.
